

Monthly Group for Young Adults with Cancer

Young cancer survivors often face a range of late effects related to cancer and its treatment, including infertility, secondary cancers, neurocognitive difficulties, chronic pain, and heart conditions.

In addition, a cancer diagnosis may present unique challenges related to work, school, health insurance, relationships, dating and sexuality, as well as emotional distress and depression.

Join us for a group dedicated to young adults 18-39 years old. The monthly meetings begin with a 30 minute speaker / presentation, followed by a short break and group discussion facilitated by Lurie Cancer Center staff. This drop-in group is open to individuals who have received cancer treatment through the Northwestern Medical Group. No advance registration required.

The group meets on the first Wednesday of each month unless otherwise indicated
